SPC Alejandro Sancho has loved combative sports since he started judo at the age of six. He began wrestling at 15, and he says Greco-Roman became his favorite "because I could throw people on their heads." After a Stellar High School career that included a Junior National Championship and World Team Membership, he committed to Northern Michigan University, where he specialized in Greco-Roman. At the senior level, he has made the finals of the Open and World Team Trials multiple times, and is now gunning for the 2020 Olympic Games.

" The Army has changed my perspective in the world and has made me more disciplined/ hard working in my daily life."
